DEUTSCHLAND MAKES SECOND VOYAGE ACROSS THE ATLANTIC

Arrives at New London Early This Morning With Million Dollar Cargo -- Will Return With Load of Nickel and Rubber -- British Will Make Usual Protest

[By United Press]
NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 1.—The Deutschland, with its cargo of drugs, medicines and dyestuffs, which have been scarce articles in this country, and valued at $1,000,000, arrived at the harbor here early this morning. She left Bremen on October 14th and made the trip to this country without special incidents. She does not intend to hurry in unloading and will load a cargo of nickel and rubber for the return trip. It is understood she carried letters to Ambassador Bernstorff.

It is anticipated the British embassy will renew its protest against the admission of the Deutschland to an American port as a merchantman.

Saw Lots of Warships
[By United Press]
NEW LONDON, Nov. 1.—Members of the crew said the Deutschland saw lots of Allied warships, once being compelled to run submerged for ten hours. They say that storms encountered the first few days out made some of the crew seasick. The crew confirms the reports of the Bremen being lost, saying she was due to arrive soon after the Deutschland's first trip. It is not believed she was captured. It is thought she met with machinery accident. The Amerika, the third of the fleet, is not yet ready to sail. A heavy guard is kept around the pier here.

Britain May Protest
[By United Press]
WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—This government does not intend to give more cognizance to the Deutschland than to any other commercial vessel.

IN LOVELOCK SENATOR PITTMAN UNMASKS PLOT TO DEFEAT HIM

[Special to Appeal]
LOVELOCK, Nov. 1.—With huge bonfires and a procession in which there were over 100 automobiles, the people of Lovelock turned out last night to honor and meet Senator Key Pittman. The opera house was filled and an overflow meeting was necessary.

After giving his audience an insight into the great progressive and humane legislation done by the Wilson administration Senator Pittman explained the deception being practiced by the Woman's party leaders in Nevada and made plain their object.

Senator Pittman answered the attacks being made upon his land bill by those who would secure his seat in the senate and demonstrated how absolutely absurd and dishonest were their claims. He explained how it would require at least three state administrations and seven legislatures to make all the selections as provided by the bill, showed how every dollar must go into the school fund of the state for the benefit of the schools thus providing a fund that would forever maintain our schools and university and save to the taxpayers at least $250,000 annually that they are paying in taxes to the school funds. He explained how the state could lease or sell the land as it saw fit from time to time and demonstrated how the prospector for water could obtain his land from the government if he did not care to buy of the state. He said the only men who could possibly object to the bill were the cattle owners who were now enjoying

A CARTOON SUGGESTION

Mister Editor Man: I wish I had the gift to draw a cartoon. I would draw one that would make the world laugh. I think I would begin by drawing the picture of a monster with a steer's head. Then on his knees I would place Punch and Judy. I would label Judy with Sam Platt's name and call Punch Ed Roberts. In Judy's hand I would place a club labeled "7,000,000 acres." And every time the master would give the word Judy would rap Punch over the head with the club.

Of course, Punch could say nothing, but would merely flinch, as he does in this campaign. To make the picture true to life there would be lines showing that Judy moved or spoke only at the command of the master, representing the big cattle interests who are using Senator Pittman's bill merely to cover up their own fear that the land in question will be taken away from them.

JOURNAL ALSO IN 'DEEP LAID CONSPIRACY'

Rumor has been current for the past few days and will not down that a combination has been consummated through which Sam Platt's chances to be elected to the United States senate, if he ever had any, have gone glimmering. Some credence must be given to the rumor from the fact that the Reno Journal and Grant Miller, Socialist candidate for United States senator are both apparently interested in the rumored deal. The story goes as follows:

The Reno Journal has a set of Republican candidates on the state ticket that it is supporting and everybody knows that the owner of that paper would sacrifice anything, even Mr. Hughes, to elect those candidates, and in order to get votes for them he is trying or has already effected a deal with the Socialists whereby a proportion of that party's votes will go to the Journal's candidates for regents and in return the Republican regents and their friends, along with the Journal and its influence, if it has any, will go to Grant Miller for senator.

It is also rumored that Miss Caroline Lowe, the Socialist platform speaker who has been touring the state in the interest of her party, has joined the Woman's party and is the one negotiating the deal. Whether this is true or not, the rumor credits her with a very prominent part in the affair. Also, in this connection, a very prominent Socialist of Carson made the statement that they, meaning the Socialist party, had been approached by Republican women in Reno, asking that the Socialist candidates for regents be withdrawn, but this was refused. The retort was then made by these women that they were going to vote for Grant Miller anyway. The Journal has been carrying a big advertisement in its columns for several days displaying the names of Hughes and Fairbanks and the Republican candidates for regents it was going to support. The name of Sam Platt is omitted, for what purpose does not appear. But this fact, taken in connection with the rumors, arouses suspicion that a deep laid plan was in mind in so doing. At any rate, it behooves Sam Platt to take cognizance of these rumors, trace them down and break the combination, or on election day he will be found running third in the senatorial race. In fact, it now looks as though that is the place he will occupy, regardless of combinations, for many Republicans throughout the state are out with knives to retaliate for suspected misdoings of two years ago.

WOMEN OF WILSON-MARSHALL CLUB HAVE EDIFYING MEETING

Show Opposite Sex That Comprehension and Interpretation of Political Problems Is Not Strictly Male Possession or Right--Large Crowd In Attendance

If anybody in Carson cherishes the thought that women cannot run a political meeting that will vie with any arranged by those of the male persuasion; that the women are not as well studied in the problems of the day and able to express their views as well as those of the opposite sex, they should have been present at the meeting at the C. and C. theater last night given by the women members of the local Wilson-Marshall club. The whole affair was a revelation, and it is almost a pity that conditions were not such that it could not have reached thousands instead of hundreds.

The theater was comfortably filled when Mrs. Nettie Quill called "time" and in a brief address she reviewed the political situations of the day speaking of the sins of omission of the enemy and lauding the administration for what it done and particularly for its efforts in behalf of equal suffrage. She raised a number of points that have not been touched upon by other speakers during the campaign and evinced throughout a comprehension of public matters that marked her as a close student of political problems. During her remarks Mrs. Quill said:

"Women want no special favors or special legislation over men. The administration of Woodrow Wilson has been one of service to humanity and the result of the coming election will show that the people of America approve of what Wilson has done for women.

"We have observed that the administration of our national affairs of the past four years has a new tone. There is consideration of all sides of a question. Decisions are made with more thought and less impulse. The general good is more considered and the special interests are not pampered. Laborers are heard as well as railroad presidents. The person who needs to borrow is consulted as to his necessity, and the one who lends is permitted his just due, and no more.

"This is almost a complete change of governmental course, and Wilson is responsible for it. Are we willing to go back to the old way? Does the opposition offer anything more?"

"Women will vote as people trying to do justice always vote—for their homes first—knowing that one who is fair to himself is fair to his neighbor; and we are not so selfish as to believe that others should be imposed upon that we may be benefited. And when the future history of America is written it will record the fact that American women stand not for the little things of sex differences, but for the great principles of rational decency and fairness, which breeds international peace; and the honor which offers and delivers justice to others as well as to ourselves."

Concluding her address Mrs. Quill introduced Miss Adalina Raffetto who said in part:

Through the ages of the past women have occupied a position of inferiority, hemmed in by prejudices.

defied by injustice, belittled, humiliated and condemned solely because of the fallacy that women were the weaker of the two sexes. But in this age of thought, action and progress woman has reached a position where she can consider herself the equal of man. Through persistent and logical agitation we proved to the men who comprised the Democratic party that we were entitled to the right of suffrage, and that party cheerfully granted our demands. Senator Pittman was one of the first to aid us materially in this state and it behooves us to show our appreciation by giving him our vote on election day.

The public, aroused to the menace of the control of the government by special interests, put Woodrow Wilson in the presidential chair four years ago. The record of that greatest of all humanitarians, supported by a Democratic congress, is best proof of the fact that the judgment of the people was correct, and a greater majority than has ever been given a president will return him to the White House where greater, broader and more humane legislation for the majority of the people of the United States will be enacted and enforced.

It is not the name of Wilson we revere; it is not the title of president we respect; it is the work of the greatest living American, who knows, feels and uses his massive brain to make this country in truth a country of the people, for the people and by the people.

There is no greater proof of his broad insight into affairs than his Mexican policy so bitterly criticized by his opponents. The difference in the point of view of the parties is this: The Republicans see in Mexico a vast territory, rich in treasure, to be exploited; the Democrats see in it a grave wherein the blood of the best of our nation would be spilled, and for whom? The oil interests, the Hearst and Otis estates, and others of the privileged class.

With the broad vision of a master
